Legacy and Leadership

About Selika

Selika Josiah Talbott is a transportation mobility executive, attorney, and policy strategist with more than 15 years at the intersection of emerging technology, public policy, and social equity. A leading voice on autonomous vehicles, electrification, and smart city infrastructure, she translates complex innovation into strategies that move both industry and communities forward. As President of The Transportation Channel (TTC), the premier media platform for the global mobility industry, she bridges high-tech innovators with the stakeholders shaping the next generation of infrastructure. At USC's Sol Price School of Public Policy, she prepares the next generation of mobility leaders. She previously co-directed the UC Davis ITS Environmental Justice Fellowship and served on the Academic Advisory Council of PAVE (Partners for Automated Vehicle Education). She is a mentor and advisor at Marshall School of Business and Los Angeles Clean Tech Incubator.

Transportation is Mobility, Mobility is Freedom.™
